《Taiwan High Speed Rail》

The Taiwan High Speed Rail starts from the northernmost Taipei Station to the southernmost Zuoying Station, with total 11 stations and 300 km.

The duration is between 96 minutes to 138 minutes, while the fare is HKD 344 - 464.

Although some stations are not located in the metropolitan area, there are also railway and road connections, which is very convenient.

The high speed rail also cooperates with well-known hotels to launch “ High-Speed Rail Holiday” offer. The number of passenger has grown from 1.3 million per month to 4 million passages per month.

《Taiwan Railway》

The route runs around the whole Taiwan, and includes distinctive feeder lines, such as Pingxi Line, Neiwai Line, Alishan Line, Jiji Line.

The Alishan Forest Railway is one of the must-see attractions when visiting Taiwan. It is worthwhile to catch up with the ancient steam train and see the scenery in the mountain.

Taiwan Railway has also launched “Travel Voucher”, which allows you to get on and off the train without limitation.

Lunchbox is another feature of Taiwan's railway culture. The simple dishes such as ribs, eggs and dried beans are the early memories of Taiwanese.

Generally speaking, lunchbox will be sold out even the meal time is not finished.

《Highway》

There are three highways for north-south direction and five highways for east-west direction.

In the picture, the artificial toll station across the expressway is longer in use. Since 2014, electronic toll collection (ETC) has been adopted and the north-south single way is about HKD 80.

Car maintenance tax is high, and the parking fee at Taipei and Xinpei city is HKD 1000 or more per month, plus the selling price of parking space is HKD 500,000. Should be consider carefully before purchasing.

Due to the lack of public transportation networks in other places, private cars are the main transport. Intercity bus is not of the most important transportation alternatives. Despite the high competition with high-speed railway, intercity bus still is a popular choice because of cheaper fare.

From Taipei to Kaohsiung, the cheapest fare is likely to be only HKD 120.

《Airport》

There are only four airport in Taiwan (Taipei, Taoyuan, Taichung and Kaohsiung). The domestic line has reached the freezing point due to the rise of the high-speed railway. There is a stable demand on travelling and backing home for Jinmen, Mazu, Wuhu, Lanyu, etc.

At present, Taichung Songshan Airport and Kaohsiung Xiaogang Airport have direct access to MRT station. It is expected to have MRT route at Taoyuan Airport, check-in and baggage service at Taipei Station.

It will take 40 minutes from Taipei station to Taoyuan Airport in the future, which is greatly reducing round-trip time and traffic jam.
