Global Equities

U.S. stocks show mixed results last Friday with strong jobs data, regional bank recovery and Apple posting better-than-expected quarterly earnings

Review: U.S. stock indexes show mixed results last Friday with strong jobs data, regional bank recovery and Apple posting better-than-expected quarterly earnings.

Outlook: Despite the Fed's persistent hawkish stance, forward indicators suggest that the peak of inflation is on the horizon. Consequently, we anticipate that the U.S. market may rebound as future rate hikes are likely to be less aggressive than initially anticipated, particularly with inflation reaching its peak.

European stocks closed slightly lower Friday as ECB confirms 25-basis-point hike

Review: The MSCI Europe Index fell 0.27% last week as ECB confirms 25-basis-point hike.

Outlook: Eurozone is still struggling with the aftermath of the Russia-Ukraine conflict. The continent has experienced substantial reductions in Russian gas supply, which has led to a surge in inflation and a negative impact on purchasing power. These challenges are expected to persist and pose downside risks to the region.

China equities show mixed results last week

Review: The Shanghai Composite Index rose 0.34% last week, while the Shenzhen Composite Index fell 0.88% last week, following banking fears were reignited on Wall Street during the week.

Outlook: As inflation continued to rise moderately, this has left more room for PBOC to continued its easing monetary policies. In addition, China government pledge for more tax cuts and infrastructure spending to boost the economy. Therefore, we are more optimistic on Chinese stocks in the near term.

Hang Seng Index rose last week

Review: Hang Seng Index rose 0.78% last week despite banking fears were reignited on Wall Street. In general, global funds are returning to Hong Kong's stock market as China has scaled back its rigid COVID-19 rules.

Outlook: As PBOC eased its monetary policy and Hong Kong stocks are still trading at attractive valuation, we believe Hong Kong stock market will probably outperform other markets in the upcoming months.

Global Bonds

FTSE World Government Bond rose last week

Review: FTSE World Government Bond Index rose 0.12% last week.

Outlook: The big question that arises is whether the current trend of flight to safety is warranted. Although central banks are taking measures to tighten the economy due to concerns regarding inflation, the potential risks of a global economic slowdown and the ongoing conflict between Russia and Ukraine could significantly disrupt the global economy once again. Investors will continue to closely monitor these developments over the coming months.

Both global high yield bond and EM bond fell last week

Review: The Bloomberg Barclays High Yield Bond Index recorded 0.24% losses, while Bloomberg Barclays EM USD Aggregate Total Return Index recorded 0.02% losses.

Outlook: We expect the market to continue to price in the timing of the Fed's tightening monetary policy, which will limit EM bond market's rise. Bonds with good fundamentals and short maturities will reduce portfolio volatility.

Weekly Report

Commodities

U.S. WTI crude fell 7.09% last week

Review: U.S. WTI fell 7.09% last week to US$71.76/bbl. Currently, investors remain very sensitized to demand-supply shifts and also to OPEC+ signals as the latter's output cuts can play a swing role amid the anticipated impact of the upcoming EU's embargo on Russian oil and also the G7 proposal to cap Russian seaborne oil prices.

Outlook: While supply disruptions and geopolitical risks remain concerning factors that could potentially drive oil prices up again, the growing global recession fears have started to exert significant downward pressure on oil prices. Therefore, we maintain a neutral rating on crude oil.

Gold prices rose 1.35% last week

Review: Spot gold rose 1.35% last week to US$2,023.05/oz. While gold is considered an inflation hedge, higher interest rates lift the opportunity cost of holding zero-yield bullion. However, gold prices are expected to hold firm this quarter as investors seek refuge from recession and war risk.

Outlook: Gold can be used as a hedge against inflationary pressures and serve as a safe-haven asset amid investors grappled with uncertainty around the geopolitical tensions and global economic slowdown.

The Bloomberg commodity spot index fell last week

Review: The Bloomberg commodity spot index fell 1.30% last week, closing at 497.48.

Outlook: Inflation and geopolitical tensions continue to pose downside risks to the global economic recovery. Investors need to remain cautious and monitor the developments in the coming months.

Currencies

USD fell 0.44% last week

Review: The US Dollar Spot Index fell 0.44% last week as rates markets continue to believe that the Fed will be much more sensitive to the financial stability risks than inflation, and the Fed's aggressive monetary tightening cycle likely come to an end.

Outlook: We believe there will be further weakness in the USD in the coming quarters, but the downward trajectory is far from straightforward. Although the fragility of global financial system has been exposed by recent banking crisis, but subsequent financial mishaps may once again trigger a funding squeeze in USD demand.

EUR rose against USD last week

Review: The EUR rose 0.60% against USD last week, primarily driven by a slightly hawkish ECB as compared to Fed.

Outlook: Despite the ongoing energy crisis, the Eurozone economy has shown a surprising level of resilience in the last quarter. While the EUR is not impervious to changes in interest rate expectations, we anticipate that the ECB is likely to experience a less severe rate repricing compared to the Fed. Moreover, we expect inflation in the Eurozone to be more structural than in the US, which could prompt the ECB to maintain higher interest rates for a more extended period than the Fed. Therefore, we believe that the USD will continue to weaken against the EUR.
